

Tea with the Changemakers

Jade Statt

StreetVet, Co-founder

This week on Tea with the Changemakers Kelly's chatting with Jade Statt, co-founder of StreetVet, the registered veterinary practice delivering care for homeless canine companions.

Homelessness is a growing problem in the UK. Many homeless people have animals, especially dogs, and have a deep-rooted connection. The health and well-being of their animal is often a major priority, however, life on the streets makes it tough to access fundamental veterinary care. That was until StreetVet.

StreetVet is a registered practice with the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, making veterinary care accessible to people living on the streets in 16 locations across the UK. StreetVet seeks out people and their dogs who live rough and deliver the care and support required to ensure their collective well-being.

Visit StreetVet where you can donate and support your local StreetVet by purchasing items on their Amazon wish lists, which directly help homeless people and their animals.
